GREENEVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Delaney received a letter Friday from their son, Patrick, who is with the cruiser St. Louis, now in the Black Sea. The letter was dated October 11th and stated that the sufferings on the other side of the ocean were terrible. The cruiser St. at present engaged in the task of picking up stragglers from the coast and carrying them to Constantinople where the Americans are feeding them. Mr. Delaney wrote that two United States destroyers were fired upon by the Reds shortly before they were sent. William Murray of Providence, spent the week end in Providence. Harry Plow of New York City was a recent visitor with his sister, Mrs. H. H. Plow of Fourth street. He is attending an electrical school. William Sample and William Blodgett spent the week end visiting relatives in New London.

Edward Delaney and Richard Molested spent the week end visiting relatives in New York City. John D. Shen of Joplin City was a week end visitor of relatives on North Main street. Miss Anna Fenech of Westport, Conn., spending a few days at the home of her sister, Mrs. Lett Gorton at Eleventh street. George Ferguson was in Joplin City on Sunday.

The annual Forty Hours' devotion opened at St. Mary's church, Sunday morning following the first of the month. It closed on Tuesday morning. All of the church societies received the sacrament at the early masses. Sunday, and the society members will serve as a Guard of Honor in processions of half an hour during the three days. Visitors to the devotion had the opportunity of seeing for the first time the handsome new church which is being erected in the parish as a large framed picture of the devotion was placed on exhibition in the vestibule of the church on Saturday. The devotion is being held in the city as a deeply interested in the church and several hundred contributors have created a fund towards the new project. With conditions favorable it is expected that devotion will be held in the future. The devotion will be held in the future. The devotion will be held in the future.

NORWICH TOWN

The audience room in the chapel of the First Congregational church was crowded, many having to find seats in the connecting parlor when the play, "How the Story Grew," was given by the Harmony class Friday evening, under the direction of their teacher, Miss Helen M. Lathrop. The rendering by the Norwich Town orchestra of L. Clair, Laybourn, Watch, Louis Dorn, Just Drama, showing skillful training and experience in playing together, was generously applauded. The characters in the play were played by Misses Lucille D. Bailey, Elizabeth L. Lether, Ida M. Beebe, Louise P. Bailey, Margaret L. Chapin, Mabel Corbridge, Minnie L. Durr, Melvina Marsh. As the story grew starting with the renting of the Smith house, there was many a local hit, and much of the talk brought out the nature of gossip which is so often taken up and repeated in communities. A large part of the entertainment was a part which gave special pleasure to the singing of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice E. Wallen, encores being responded to. In the last song, "Sing Me to Sleep," in which Mr. and Mrs. Wallen joined, their voices blended admirably. Rev. Mr. Bailey voiced the appreciation of all.

RULES AGAIN CLAIM OF GROTON MAN

Claim for compensation has been denied by Commissioner James J. Donohue in the case of Louis Rose of No. 71 Thames street, Groton, claimant against The Haddock Fishing Firm, Inc., of New London. The commissioner's finding was announced Saturday afternoon. The hearing was held in the commissioner's office in the Central building Tuesday, December 7th.

At the hearing the testimony showed that on Jan. 10th, 1919, the claimant received an injury arising out of and in the course of his employment consisting of a punctured wound of the right foot caused by stepping on a nail. Because of said injury, which was cared for by Dr. H. H. H. H. of Groton, the claimant was disabled until Feb. 10th, 1919, on which day he resumed work. An agreement for compensation at the rate of $14 per week was approved by the commissioner, and it found that the terms of the agreement have been fully complied with.

On Sept. 20, 1919, or about eight months later, the claimant received another injury consisting of a second degree burn of the left hand, injury arising out of and in the course of his employment with the same respondent employer. This injury was treated by Dr. Barnum of Groton and resulted in an incapacity extending to Nov. 3, 1919, on which day he returned to his regular employment. This injury was compensated for by the terms of an agreement approved by the commissioner, which provided for compensation at the rate of $13.33 per week during disability, together with medical, surgical and hospital services. It was found that the terms of this agreement have also been fully complied with.

On Jan. 21st, 1920, while tending a cupola in the foundry of the insured, the claimant was taken sick and returned to his home, and was treated by Dr. Barnum of Groton, who diagnosed the case as influenza and pneumonia. On Feb. 10, 1920, a condition of phlebitis developed which resulted in gangrene and necessitated the amputation of the claimant's right leg a few inches below the knee on March 2d, 1920.

The hearing was called by the respondent for the purpose of determining the question as to whether the claimant was entitled to compensation because of the amputation of his leg, and also to determine whether the condition which necessitated the amputation was in any way connected with his employment. The testimony shows that the claimant is an incessant smoker of cigarettes, smoking about a dozen a day, and that he has been in the habit of doing this ever since he was about 15 years of age. Cigarette smoking has been known to produce a condition of endarteritis obliterans which would not support this idea, but the facts do not support this idea and consequently it is found that the phlebitis was the causative factor in the production of the gangrene in this case. It is also found that the condition of phlebitis was not connected with the pneumonia and influenza which he developed about the first of February, 1920, and that the phlebitis could not have been traceable to either of the injuries mentioned above. The period of time elapsing between cause and effect was too great to show any causal connection between the injuries and the phlebitis. From the facts as found neither one of the injuries received by the claimant in the year 1919 could have led in any way to the phlebitis which developed in February, 1920 and which ultimately caused the amputation of the leg.

right foot, has been clearly established, and the wound healed in the regular course of events; he being able to resume work in about a month's time. The phlebitis could not be traced to either of the injuries which he received in 1919, but was dependent upon this injury as the testimony of the attending physician shows.

About eight months later he suffered a burn of the left foot but this healed in the regular course, and he returned to his work in a few weeks and continued at his regular occupation. In the opinion of the physician who attended this second injury there was no connection between it and the phlebitis which developed about five months later.

By the process of elimination of the other questions involved this brings squarely to the question of what was the causative factor in producing the phlebitis (which has been found to be the direct cause of the amputation of the leg), and whether the employment had anything to do with the contraction of the influenza and pneumonia from the phlebitis developed.

The claimant suffered from an attack of influenza in February, 1920, and he also had an attack in September, 1919. This last attack of influenza, in 1919, carried with it the regular bronchial pneumonia which is the typical form of pneumonia which comes with the influenza. It was not the lobar type of pneumonia.

This influenza and pneumonia is a contagious and infectious disease, acute in type, and in this particular case had the marked cerebral inflammation of the respiratory tract. This is a disease which is on an epidemic character and one which spreads with the greatest rapidity, as was noticeable in the recent epidemic which occurred in this country. It confers no exemption and previous attacks, instead of conferring immunity, as in many diseases, in this particular type, predisposes other attacks.

Two Hurt in 14 Foot Drop by Automobile

About 6 o'clock Saturday afternoon a touring car driven by Charles Thompson and containing his brother, Walter Thompson and six other men, dropped over a fourteen foot embankment on the road at Versailles, injuring the driver and his brother Walter. The six others escaped injury, although they were badly shaken up. Charles Thompson is suffering from what is thought to be a broken ankle and his brother, Walter Thompson, who was pinned under the car, has several broken ribs.

The eight men who are employees of the St. Wales Lumber Company of Norwich are at work on a construction job at the Versailles paper mill. They had left their work and were on their way to Norwich when the accident happened. While Charles Thompson was driving the car along the dark road the headlights suddenly went out and while Mr. Thompson was stooping over to switch them on again the car, which was traveling at a moderate rate of speed, went over the embankment. It was necessary to jump up the car in order to extricate the driver.

The injured men were brought to Norwich and to their rooms at the Lenox House on Franklin square where they were attended by Dr. W. T. Driscoll.

MISS MARY LORDE NOW

Miss Mary L. Lord, who has done evangelistic work in this city and was at one time pastor of the church at Monahan, has been granted a license as a local preacher and is now pastor of the Granby Methodist church. CLASS GIVES SURPRISE
FOR ARTHUR L. PEALE
At the Community House on Saturday evening, a surprise party on the event of his birthday, was given Arthur L. Peale by his Sunday school class of young women. The table, where covers were laid for twenty-five, was very attractive with favors and lighted candles, a birthday cake, also decorated with candles, forming the centerpiece. During the evening games were played and a general jolly time enjoyed. As a token of their affection and esteem the class presented Mr. Peale a leather belt with a handsomely engraved buckle wrought silver buckle.
